SAŽETAK PREDAVANJA

It is widely acknowledged that the largest number of archaic features is in the varieties of Macedonian spoken in areas where the Albanian, Aromanian, and Greek languages are found. Yet at the same time, these same dialects attest to a number of innovations, owing to contacts with other languages. The Boboshtica (or Korça) dialect, also known as "Kajnas" by its speakers, is considered one of the most archaic, and yet also one of the most innovative on the Macedonian dialectal map. However, being spoken by only 1 remaining speaker its destiny is to go extinct. With this lecture I would like to draw the attention of the Croatian public to the dialect itself and to its unique features, as well as to "The Boboshtica Gospel" – a text from the 19th century written fully in this dialect.
